BUSINESS CHIEFS' A5 SAFETY FEARS

Report by Sue Austin

A PROMINENT Oswestry businessman says the A5 is so dangerous that he fears for the safety of his staff who are forced to use it on a daily basis

And another business leader says he prefers to drive through the town rather than use the heavily congested

A5 Oswestry bypass.

The businessmen have spoken of their worries about the road as a campaign by the Chronicle's sister paper the Shropshire Star for the road to be improved this week gathered key support from council bosses. Shane Parr, who founded Stonehouse Brewery

Online Fair, with followed Stonlendors Brewely 10 years ago, employs more than a dozen people, including delivery drivers.

Mr Parr added his voice to the campaign to have the A5 included in the Government's Road Improvement Strategy and upgraded to a dual carriageway.

He said: "As an employee I feel responsible for the safety of the staff and I worry about the drivers who have to use the A5 daily.
"One day they could be driving north along the A5 to-wards Wrexham and Chester, another day south to Shrewsbury and south Shropshire. Traffic comes off the dual carriageways at Shrewsbury and Wrexham and suddenly we have a bottleneck.

Wrexham and suddenly we have a bottleneck.

"There are also the dangers of drivers who get frustrated sitting in slow moving traffic and overtake in the middle of the road."

Another local businessman who wants improvements is Mike Harris, chairman of Welsh Premier football champions The New Saints.
He says he often refuses to drive along the Oswestry bypass, instead going through the centre of the town that the road was built to avoid.
"It is ridiculous but it is quicker." he said.
"We live in a beautiful part of the world yet we have a main road that is completely out of date. There are too many vehicles on our roads we have a main road that is completely out of date. There are too many vehicles on our roads and this is highlighted on the A5, particularly at the Mile End roundabout and Oswestry bypass." Leaders of Shropshire Council and Telford and Wrekin Council have in the past week also voiced their support for the road to be upgraded to a dual carriageway.

Meanwhile, members of Oswestry Town Council were due to discuss the fresh calls for improvements to the A5 at a meeting last night (Wednesday). Councillors were due to debate whether to support the new campaign and its whether to support the new campaign and its online petition

THOUSANDS of people from all over the country donned their victory rolls, buttoned up their uniforms or pulled up their nylons to get into the spirit of a 1940s-throwback weekend.

"When I first held the event three years ago, it was meant to be a one-off, but it has really grown. More shop windows were decorated this year, and two or three pubs have held events, so the businesses are really getting behind it." Mr Crowe said he is keen to see the event return next year.

Referendum on A&E to take place

A DATE has been set for a referendum on the future of A&E services in Shropshire.

Welshpool Town Council has agreed to spend around £1,000 organising a referendum to see where residents of the town want services to be provided in Shropshire.

It will give residents the chance to say if they want an urgent care centre in Shrewsbury or Telford. Mayor Steve Kaye said the referendum would take place on October 26 and would help people better understand the health issue the treaty and the celebrations in Montgomery to mark the occasion.

On September 29, 1267, King Henry III of England and Llywelyn agruffydd, Prince of Gwynedd, signed the Treaty which recognised Llywelyn as the Prince of Wales. The 1267 treaty gave Llywelyn Builth, Brecon and Whittington Castle as part of the deal.

He also received an assurance that no castle would be built at Hawarden for 60 years by Robert of Mold, secur-ing the north-eastern border of Wales.

However, following the succession of Edward I as King of England in 1272, relations between England and Wales deteriorated and Edward declared war on Llywelyn in 1276.

Mr George said: "I was delighted that the presiding officer gave me the opportunity to mark this significant occasion in Montgomery's history.

"To celebrate the 750th anniversary of the treaty's signature, Montgomery Town Council and partners arranged a short re-enactment of the treaty signing with local schoolchil-dren taking part." Other celebrations included a medieval banquet and entertainment in the town hall

He suffered from multi organ failure and died on August 1, 2015.

When in hospital, Jake planned to raise money to brighten up the ward he was on, and two years later thanks to fundraising efforts by friends, family and the local community, £26,280 has been raised to fund the work.

The money was handed over to the hospital at a tea and cake event at the Canolfan Centre, which was attended by family, friends and others who had contributed to the fundraising.

Fundraising manager Angela Rowe attended the event, and read out a tribute from Professor Rob Wyn, who the family met during Jake's time in hospital.

The professor said: "I am so sorry that we were not able to make Jake better. He was a fine young man, and strong and de-termined. We are so grateful for this work of Jake's family and friends and will always remember Jake, a courageous, humorous lovely young man."

BREEZE ABOUT TOWN

Welshpool really is becoming the events capital of Mid Wales, particularly with the announcement of an all-new Festival of Transport on the way next year from the busy town council. Don't let anyone tell you there's nothing to do in Welshpool. There's a festival of sport, a music festival, a country & a music festival, a country & western festival, a food festival and a Christmas/Winter festival. There's an annual carnival, and a 40s weekend, endless activities on the Welshpool & Llanfair Railway and Montgomery Canal and of course a range of events at Powis Castle.

And it's great news to hear that the town council is not letting the grass grow under its feet after the disappointment of having to ground the annua Bob Jones Memorial Air Show The announcement of a new and completely revamped transport festival next June is wonderful news for the town.

Many of us can remember the early days of the transport festival which brought thousands of visitors to the area. But the event was down-graded and became part of the air show on a much smaller scale. This move by the council is to be applauded. The next time someone moans to you that there's nothing to do in Welshpool just rattle of this list of events - that should shut them

Town Council's plans for installing charging points for electric and hybrid cars in the town car parks. The move shows not just the council's commitment for attracting people into the town centre, but also recognition of the way we will all be driving in the not-so-distant future. As the author of a motoring column for the past 40 years I have seen incredible changes in the car industry. Some might remember the days when we had to crank up our own engines - today's cars virtually drive themselves.

With oil reserves under pressure there is no doubt that to morrow's cars will all depend on plugs-in. There's already over half a million electric and plug-invehicles on the roads of Europe and more and more manufactur ers are being shaken from com-placency by the electric vehicle earthquake.

Along with e-bikes, electric scooters and electrified trains and trams road vehicles are part of a greener mobile future, kicking dirty cars and trains into the scrapyard. We are no longer questioning whether this will happen, but now it's how long it will take.

Council leaders add their voices to road campaign

A campaign to have the A5 improved is winning backing from council bosses. SUE AUSTIN reports

POLITICAL leaders thrown their weight behind a campaign to dual the A5, saying the move could play a vital part in the economic development of Shropshire.

Councillor Peter Nutting, the leader of Shropshire Council, said that he is "fully supportive" of efforts to make the road a dual carriageway between Shrewsbury and Oswestry.

His comments come after Shropshire control in the council said a comprehensive account.

Council unveiled a comprehensive economic strategy designed to bring more business to the county and to help those already here grow even further. He said: "I have always fully supported the dualling of the A5 from Shrewsbury to Oswestry. If you travel through Europe people say you can travel from Naples to Northern Ireland and the only place you reach a single carriageway is in Shropshire and that's a nonsense."

The Chronicle's sister paper the Shropshire Star launched its campaign to dual the A5 last week

Councillor Nutting, who represents help boost the region, said he had raised the issue of the A5 with the West Midlands Mayor, Andy Street.

bypass, it is the only section of single carriageway road between Dover and Holyhead, a key strategic route linking the UK to Ireland.

The campaign has already been backed by North Shropshire MP Owen Paterson, who has a long history of campaigning for the road to be dualled. He has been a voice advocating the move since he became the MP for the area in 1907

Mr Paterson said it was vital that the A5 be included in future investment plans from the Government, describing it as "an absolute priority".

Mr Paterson estimates the cost to the public purse as a result of the accidents on the road since 1992 as being in the region of £220m. Shropshire Council's deputy leader, Steve Charmley, has also backed the move and said the route would be vital for the region's economy. He said: "We need this road dualled to help our economy."

The Star is calling on roads minister
John Hayes to include the A5 in his Road Investment Strategy and upgrade it to a dual carriageway from Montford Bridge to Chirk. The Shropshire Star is asking readers to sign the petition so that it can be presented to the Government as part of the 'Dual It!' campaign.

Ioan Copil, 35, a car salesman and valeter of Church Street, Hadley, Tel-guilty to being concerned in the production of the drug.

Judge Peter Heywood was told at Caernarfon Crown Court that police

Bosses asked 7 to chant at top meeting

HOSPITAL bosses were told to chant "we can do this" by a NHS official in an effort to improve their accident and emergency performance, it has been revealed.

It was reported that the incident happened at a meeting attended by Health Secretary Jeremy Hunt and Simon Stevens, the head of the NHS in England.

The leaders of about 60 trusts deemed to have the worst A&E waiting time record were called into a meeting held in London on September 18.

Simon Wright, chief executive of The Shrewsbury and Telford Hospital NHS Trust, attended the meeting in London and said it was useful to meet other col-leagues. He said: "I certainly wasn't chanting. I think what they were trying to convey is that although this is a difficult environment there are things that everyone can do to improve performance. They were seeking to encourage teams that this is something we can do better than we are doing at the moment. I would accept that. We have to do that through learning and not blame.

"The meeting was useful in the sense I met with other colleagues I had not seen in a while and was able to ask them how they are meeting some of the challenges and any top tips they might have.

"I think understanding what the context is from a national point of view is also helpful because you can then appreciate the level of requests through the winter

'Catastrophic impact fears

COUNCILS have warned the Health Secretary of a "catastrophic impact" if the Government withholds millions of pounds of funding for adult social care.

Shropshire and Telford & Wrekin Councils have joined nine other councils in the region writing to Jeremy Hunt, expressing their concern over "unrealistic targets" their concern over "unrealistic targets" for cutting bed blocking in hospitals. The target is for the number of NHS beds taken up by delayed discharges to be reduced to 3.5 per cent by this month. If the target is not met then some money from the Better Care Fund will not be transferred to councils for adult social care.

The 11 councils say they could lose out on £150 million as a result.
Councillor Shaun Davies, leader of Telford & Wrekin Council, said the targets were "unrealistic".
He said: "This in turn will have a catastrophic impact on the ability of local authorities offseted to deligns counties."

authorities affected to deliver essential services including reablement, home care and residential/nursing care. The threat of funding being withdrawn has also damaged relationships.

"We are therefore urging Mr Hunt to provide assurances as a matter of extreme urgency that all local authorities will receive their funding in full."

Network set to meet up in town

THE Shropshire & Mid Wales Network of Chron's and Colitis UK will meet in Oswestry on October 14.

The meeting takes place from 1.30pm to 3.30pm at The Memorial Hall in Oswestry.

3.30m at The Memorial Hall in Oswestry. The event will be the group's first ever meeting in Oswestry. Dr Jeff Butterworth, gastroenterologist for Shrewsbury and Telford Hospital, will be in attendance. A spokesman said: "The meeting is an opportunity to talk about IBD with people who understand. An opportunity for everyone to share information and stories and for us to communicate future. ries, and for us to communicate future plans and events. We always receive lots of positive feedback about these meetings, especially those new members or recently diagnosed individuals who greatly value the experience and information shared from our longer-term members. If you have any suggestions we would welcome them by email at smw@networks.crohnsandcolitis.org.uk or by sending us a mes-sage on our Facebook page."

Trust admits failing to ensure safety of elderly patients who suffered falls in care

THE full extent of risks to five elderly patients who suffered falls at Shropshire's two main hospitals were not taken into consideration, a court heard.

court heard.
Shrewsbury and Telford Hospital NHS
Trust has admitted failing to ensure the safety of five patients who had falls while at Telford's
Princess Royal Hospital or Royal Shrewsbury Hospital in 2011 and 2012. The court heard the five patients later died, with the falls being a contributory factor in four of the cases.

Mr Bernard Thorogood, prosecuting, told Stafford Crown Court in one case 74-year-old Mohan Singh suffered a fall at Princess Royal Hospital. But Mr Thorogood said the fall could have been prevented if one-on-one care had Report by Lisa O'Brien been provided, as requested by a staff nurse The court heard that the nurse was told there was nobody available to give that care.

Mr Thorogood said: "In relation to Mr Singh the staff on the ward did what they could but they could not provide what he needed, one-to-one supervision.

"If he had been given the enhanced care he clearly needed this fall would not have taken place." He said a post-mortem report showed the fall had contributed to his death.

In another case Mr Thorogood said 81-yearold Eileen Thomson had been admitted to was a contributory factor.

PRH in 2012 and was at high risk of suffering a fall. He said she fell on two occasions in the hospital but forms were not updated to indicate this had happened.

The court was told that through a lack of staff "enhanced care" initially given to Ms Thomson came to an end. She died after suffering a fractured skull after a fall.

Edna Evans, 92, was also admitted to PRH in 2012, where she suffered a fall fracturing her shoulder. Mr Thorogood said she climbed out of her bed and fell.

Ms Evans was discharged but died from a severe chest infection but Mr Thorogood told the court a postmortem report showed the fall in 2012. Mr Thorogood said an assessment did not cover several risk factors in her case. He said after changing wards, not all information about her was passed to staff and she was put in a normal bed despite having a possible infec-tion which can cause confusion. She was later found on the floor by her bed. Gerald Morris, 72, was admitted to RSH following a fall at his home. He later suffered a fall and an x-ray showed he had a fractured femur. He died after contracting a chest infection but Mr Thorogood said it could not be proven that the hospital fall directly contributed to his death.

Hospitals 'need extra 99 beds over winter months'

Report by Amy Downward

HOSPITALS in Shropshire will need an extra 99 beds and about £2.5 million to help them through winter, bosses have revealed.

Shrewsbury and Telford Hospital NHS Trust has said the cost of covering the winter plan this year is estimated at £2.4

Hospital bosses have already received £1 million and said the remaining £1.4 million is within the financial recovery plan, but is still subject to discussions with other health officials cials.

Simon Wright, chief executive of SaTH, said the trust has also identified ways to create 103 beds – four more than the extra capacity required of 99 beds.

He said: "We have been looking at getting surgery more efficient so they rely on fewer beds to deliver the care – what we don't want to see a real panel description."

"Another one is over the years you do find that ward space gets used for different things e.g. offices, quiet rooms, etc.

"What we have done is found about 31 bed spaces that today are not used by patients but can be reactivated for the winter.

"The biggest way to create the bed spaces is to make sure the patients that have finished their care in a hospital setting can be sent home quicker – for example by giving therapy at home

"The other is increasingly the availability of packages of care to be ready on day one instead of days five or six.

"We are working very hard with both councils to get something in place by the end of "That will free up about 50 beds.

"We are also looking at a mobile ward and theatre at whatever site needs it the most."

A weekend discharge team will also be set up as part of the winter plan.

It is noped this will increase the number of patients sent home at the weekend. Health bosses are also hoping to set up a discharge lounge at Royal Shrewsbury Hospital. This will be a new area where patients are sent to while they wait for their final checks before they can go home. The idea has been put forward to a meeting of the trust's board.

Neurology suspension extended to find

SHROPSHIRE patients who need to be referred to a neurology specialist will have to travel out of the county for at least another six months.

In March health bosses said the neurology service in Shropshire would be temporarily unable to accept new referrals for six months to clear the backlog.

Good wishes for children's hospice

GOOD wishes have been pouring in for a children's hospice, in the shape of pennies and pounds.

EasyJet making it simple for connecting flights

EasyJet is making travel easier for passengers

EASYJET will provide feeder traffic to long-haul carriers for the first time, the budget airline has announced.

Passengers taking connecting flights via London Gatwick – such as those travelling from Aberdeen to New York – will be able to book the entire trip on EasyJet's website. The airline has formed a partnership with Norwegian and WestJet, offering flights to North and South America and the Ear East the Far East.

Under the Worldwide scheme, passengers will also be able to connect with other easyJet flights.

About 200,000 passengers a year connect from one easyJet flight to another at Gatwick, but they have previously needed to book each flight separately and transfer their own luggage.

The announcement represents one of the most significant strategic changes made by the airline since it introduced allocated seating in 2012.

Bookings will include the Gatwick-Connects service, meaning passengers' checked luggage will be transferred to their second flight.

If they miss their connection they will be given a seat on the next available flight free of charge.

EasyJet said it will sign up other airlines to the new system and discussions are "already far advanced" with Middle Eastern and Far Eastern carriers.

It plans to expand to other key airports in Europe such as Milan Malpensa, Geneva, Amsterdam, Paris Charles de Gaulle and Barcelona.

New ride is making a big splash at Center Parcs

Report by Claire Spreadbury

GETTING into a two-person inflatable raft - in a swimming costume - is one of the most ungainly things you can possibly do.

But as I straddle the figure of eight-shaped rubber ring, gripping on to the handles and waiting for the green light of the Typhoon, I can't say I really care. We're all here for a bit of family fun, and trying out Center Parcs' trying out Center Parcs' newest water ride is making me feel a bit giddy.

SO WHAT'S IT LIKE?

I'm not much of a water-slide fan any more. There's definitely something about getting older and having kids, that makes me less able to enjoy the sensation of feeling like my stomach is going to fall out my backside, and more miffed about the pain plunging into a pool side, and more miffed about the pain plunging into a pool gives me as the water shoots up my nose. But the Typhoon, I have to say, is great.

It's family friendly, so me and my eight-year-old Rosie, go down together (there is a height restriction of 1.22m, which she's only just over). It's fast and quick with a bit of splashing, but not so scary you lose your stomach or get washed up and spat out at the end (the inflatable raft helps with this).

To add to the fun factor, you can choose your own lighting theme – from treetops to rainbow – by pressing a button at the top, then swooshing down the tunnel.

BUT WAIT, THERE'S MORE...

For those needing something a little more exciting, the Tropical Cyclone has also just landed here at Long-leat Forest, but it's been in Center Parcs in Woburn for some time now.

Up to four of you can go on a raft at any one time and there are mega drops, adrenaline pumping twists

Up to four of you can go on a raft at any one time and there are mega drops, adrenaline pumping twists and turns, and a world of swearing coming down the shoot, despite the same height restriction. It's not for the faint-hearted, but is a whole heap of fun.

The rides are the latest addition to the Subtropical Swimming Paradise, where even on a rainy day in the school holidays, it never feels too busy.

There are lots of different areas, so you can head to the main pool for squeals galore as you jump over the

to the main pool for squeals galore as you jump over the surf from the wave machine, splash about in a shallow kids' play area, hang out in the outdoor spa pool, and slide down flumes of every size and variety.

Oh, and be sure to drift down the lazy river at least 17 times, like us, and try out the fun rapids.

WHAT ELSE TO DO?

What isn't there to do? The

What isn't there to do? The great thing about Center Parcs is there's an abundance great thing about Center Parcs is there's an abundance of activities going on and you can choose how much, or how few, you fancy doing.

We try out Den Building and Decorating – one of the newer family activities. Unlike the usual sofa and sheets affair that goes on at home, we head out into the woods where three thin logs have been tied together to start us off. We have a massive pile of twigs, branches and logs, a tarpaulin, some leaves, and four pairs of hands ready to get dirty.

We work together to make a small, pyramid-shaped den, create some 'flowers' for the entrance by stabbing twigs through heaps of leaves and decorate some lovely signage.

twigs through neaps of leaves and decorate some lovely signage.

At the end, all the families go round inspecting the different dens, and one person from each clan has to sit inside while the waterproofing test takes place, and then we have to dismantle the whole thing.

It costs £46.50 (however big your party) and lasts for an hour and a half. We had a really good time getting stuck in, but there are oodles of other activities too, from sports and quad biking, to ten-pin bowling and photography lessons. They all cost extra, but there's no pressure or upsell to do a thing.

ADULTS ALSO GET TO HAVE FUN

The Aqua Sana spa can be used by day guests, as well as anyone staying at Center Parcs. The spa itself consists of 25 "experiences", from the Indian blossom steam room and the hydro pool, to the Tyrolese Sauna and Reflexology Footbaths. It's a spa that's been well thought-out and is a joy to slouch around, as you move from one meditative state to another.

Yet there is another reason why you try and make the most of these dying days of summer when it comes to butterflies

The culprit, at least in part, seems to be climate change and this global phenomenon appears to be having an even greater than expected negative impact. Small copper numbers recently fell by almost a quarter on previous years' numbers.

Farm union in plea on regulation

NFU Cymru has called for the government to have a re-think on regulation in a new report.

It's the perfect Pace for a big old Hairspray 'do' e's sitting in a pub in Lytham St Anne's. Norman Pace is chipper. The actor and comedian who is best known as one half of the comedy duo Hale and Pace has as much work as he would care for and is at peace with the world.

He's presently on the road in Hairspray, the 15-minute blitzkrieg of scintillating fabulousness. The all-singing, all-dancing, all-action musical is set in Baltimore, 1962. It tells the story Tracy Turnblad, a big girl with big

It fells the story Iracy Turnblad, a big girl with big hair and an even bigger dream: to dance her way onto national TV, and into the heart of teen idol Link Larkin. Tracy's audition makes her a local star and soon she is using her new-found fame to fight for integration. But can she win equality – and Link's heart – without denting her 'do?

The feel-good musical features the hit songs Welcome To The 60s, You Can't Stop The Beat, The Nicest Kids in Town and many more and has Norman smiling each and every night.

"I have to say that I know Hairspray is a very good show but this really is a tremendous production. Drew McOnie is the go-to choreographer in Broadway and the West End and has worked on this.

"They really pulled out all the stops to get the right people for the show. They went through 1,600 hopefuls before they settled on the 32 people that you see on on stage. It's my first time in it and I'm loving it. A few of the guys have done this before but I'm the new boy, which is funny, since I'm also by far the oldest."

Reaching the tender age of 64 – amid a cast of 20-somethings – is great fun for Norman. Being around the younger generation keeps him

"I love being with the kids. Their enthusiand joie de vivre is inspiring. I get up at the end of the show and we do You Can't Stop the Beat. I love it. I do it eight times a week. Before I start, I know the audiences will love it and go mad. We've done 40-odd shows and every one has been a standing ovation.

"Seriously, you couldn't wish for a better group. Last night, after the show in Blackpool, one of the guys from the show said he knew a bloke who'd got a pub that did live music. Out of the 55 people on tour, 40 people turned up and we had a great night. The band got up and entertained us. It's brilliant fun."

Norman has to pinch himself when he considers the number of years he's successfully spent in showbusiness. The former teacher has been treading the boards for 36 years – many of them with his friend and comic partner Gareth Hale. They recently recorded four episodes of ITV's Benidorm, spending 10 weeks in Spain with Shropshire actor John Challis, among others.

And yet for Norman, all roads lead to the Black

And yet for Norman, all roads lead to the Black Country. Though he grew up in Newark-on-Trent, in Nottinghamshire, his heart belongs to Dudley.

"My granny and grandad lived in Dudley.

"My granny and grandad lived in Dudley. When my mother was pregnant with me at the age of 18, she went to Dudley to have the baby. I think there was some sort of scandal because of the Catholic Church – if it wasn't for the church, I wouldn't be here. They didn't do such things as abortion back then.

So mum tried to pull a fast one and had me in Dudley then I'd visit my granny and grandad on holidays. They lived on Blowers Green Crescent, I still remember it now.

"There were slag heaps that were turned into football pitches and I'd go there until about the age of ten. The family were West Brom fans and took me to the Hawthorns to cheer on the Baggies. They were happy times. I felt very loved when I visited the Black Country."

Famé came calling for Hale and Pace when they worked together on a series of comedy shows, as well as featuring in Dalziel and Pascoe, guest starring in the Doctor Who serial Survival and Who serial Survival and featuring in a Christmas Special of Extras. "It was a joyride. The whole thing was thrilling and we didn't have a minute to stop and think about it. If Gareth and I weren't making the TV series, we'd be touring. In every spare moment we'd be writing and we were even stupid enough to go on holiday together as families.

"The only downside about that experience was losing your privacy. At the petrol station, a queue of people would look at you like you were in a goldfish bowl. I'm under the radar these days and there are times when I grow a beard and people don't recognise me. It used to be that you'd get people arguing about which one you were. But it's no big deal. I had my taste of that life and it was intense. I can understand why film stars have people to fill their car up for them. Can you imagine what would happen if Rod Stewart was on the forecourt at Morrisons?"

Norman has no plans to slow down. There's no exit strategy, no secret yearning for a quieter life, no intention of upping sticks and moving to somewhere quieter.

"The laughter is what keeps you coming back. Even now, after all these years, if you're good at it and have a lot of experience and have enjoyed a long career, you can still learn a lot of things about how to do it better. I always want to beat the laughter I got last night, I want to keep moving forward."

He loves the fact that he's been able to play both TV and theatre during a starry career. He's worked with tremendous actors down the decades and their skills have belied him to develop.

have helped him to develop.

For now, all thoughts are of Hairspray. "It's great bringing the show to Birmingham because Dudley's only just down the road and that's always been special to me. I'm hoping that people from Dudley and Wolves will pop over and say hello."

edicated triplets happy to help railway

Passengers on a heritage railway could be forgiven for thinking they are seeing double or even triple.

But it is not their eyesight or their imagination. The Talyllyn Railway in Mid Wales has probably scored a worldfirst with triplets passing their training as assistant guards on the same day.
Brothers Jake, Ross and Joe Waddington all came through their assessment with flying colours and have moved to the next level of training before becoming guards on the railway.

The 16-year-old brothers, who live near the railway, have been volunteering on the railway for a couple of years. To ensure they could all qualify together, special arrangements were made for them all to be assessed on the same day.

lan Drummond, Talyllyn Railway Preservation Society's chairman, said "Joe, Jake and Ross have contributed a great deal to the railway already.

"Their positive attitude in all that they do has won them many friends on the railway.

"We look forward to seeing them progress further in the years ahead."

In 1951, operation of the line was taken over by Talyllyn Railway Preservation Society and it became the world's first preserved railway.

Operation of the line is primarily by volunteers from all walks of life, with a small paid staff. Mr Drummond said: "It is now a major tourist attraction in the Mid Wales area, contributing significantly to the area's economy.

"They really are tremendous boys who love trains and love being part of the team," said operating assistant John Smallwood, a volunteer.

Spotlight on Mattise

The works of one of the most important modern artists of the 21st century is on show at a gallery in Óswestry. Qube Gallery in Oswestry is shining the spotlight on the work of French artist Henri Matisse. Matisse was a French painter and sculptor who, along with Picasso helped to define and influence radical contemporary art in the 20th century. The exhibition, called 'Matisse, Drawing the Scissors includes works produced in the last few years of the artist's life when he was confined to his bed. Qube chief officer, Laurel Roberts said: "We're very grateful to Arts Council England for enabling Qube to host this fantastic collection. Matisse is a household name and this is an opportunity for local people to see these famous images right on the doorstep." Qube has organised a programme of activities alongside the exhibition, including a series of workshops for local schools. Children will have the chance to work with Wem-based community media organisation, MediaActive and learn how to create short animations from coloured cut-out shapes using on their i-pads and tablets. The school activities have been sponsored by Oswestry Rotary Club with funding from the Mary Hignett Bequest Fund. President of Oswestry Rotary Club, David Davies said: "This is a great experience for the children and just the kind of thing Mary would have liked to have been involved with.

The exhibition will run until October 29.

TLC on the comeback trail

Performing live with a full band, horn section, dancers and choir to an ecstatic audience, the emotional London comeback night was met with critical acclaim. The

By Graham Breeze

It takes guts for one of the world's biggest car producers to admit they got it wrong but Renault had to do just that with the Koleos - because it never really took off in the UK.

But all that could be about to change with the arrival of a new large Koleos SUV option fully equipped to take on Nissan, Skoda, Ford and Hyundai and building on the success of the smaller Kadjar and Captur ranges Renault pulled the plug on the original Koleos back in 2010 with the British crossover market still in its infancy. Since then the SUV sector has been the place to be seen so it had to be only a matter of time before the French threw their hat into the ring again - and this time they look ready to become a big player.

Though the company may just live to regret a decision to reveal a UK line-up which is exclusively diesel – just at the time when the Government is trying to steer us away from diesel engines. Time will tell on that one with buyers able to pick from front or all-wheel drive and manual or a CVT X-Tronic automatic gearbox.

You would also hang a big question mark over pricing too with the Dynamique S Nav dCi 130 starting the range off at £27,500 and the Signature Nav dCi 175 Auto X-Tronic setting you back £34,200.
That's considerably more than the opposition though the difference is in spec levels where just about everything you need comes in the standard price and that includes hands-free parking, panoramic sunroof, heated and ventilated front seats and cup holders, one-touch easy folding rear seats, 360 degree parking sensors, LED headlights, live traffic updates, a rear parking camera, an 8.7inch portrait-style touchscreen, BOSE sound system, Apple Car Play, lane departure warning, blind spot warning, traffic sign recognition and hands-free poweroperated tailgate

Unlike most of its rivals the Koleos is not offered as a seven-seater, though there's no shortage of space with plenty of legroom for all five occupants and wide rear of headroom even with the panoramic roof in place.

Boot space is competitive and easily passes the golf clubs test, though for a car with no seven-seat opposition you might have expected a bigger box. There's an annoyingly high loading lip too.

I've always been a fan of Renault seating and there's plenty to rejoice about up-front with an outstandingly comfortable set-up.

And while the dash still seems to be fighting a combination of old and new design you can't help but be impressed by the portrait centre touchscreen system which houses just about everything on offer.

Equipment

I'm still not convinced that all this technology isn't as big a distraction as a mobile phone. It takes the driver's eyes away from the road and on test two seasoned motoring journalists were struggling to master the Sat Nav system. As you would expect Renault has packed the Koleos with safety equipment. That includes six airbags, an emergency braking system that gives almost too much warning if you are going to hit the car in front

You also get blind spot warning, road sign recognition and electronic stability control.

The All-New Koleos's engine and transmission line-up has been tailored to meet the needs and expectations of the model's European markets. Two diesel engines are offered, which deliver 130 and 175hp respectively. The 130hp unit is available with a six-speed manual transmission and the 175hp engine can be chosen with either an X-Tronic automatic seven-speed transmission or a six-speed manual gearbox.

Both engines meet Euro 6b legislation and are equipped with Stop&Start, a NOx trap and a particulate filter. The 1.6-litre four-cylinder, 16-valve ENERGY dCi 130 engine has 130hp (96kW) at 4,000rpm, while peak torque is delivered at 320Nm, available from 1,750 to 2,250rpm. This engine can only be specified with two-wheel drive and a six-speed manual gearbox. It returns 57.6mpg and

The Koleos SUV is fully equipped to take on the likes of Nissan, Skoda, Ford and Hyundai produces 128/g/km of CO2, attracting 27% Benefit in Kind taxation (BIK).

The 2.0 Energy DCi 175 engine is the most powerful and comes only with four-wheel drive but with a choice of either 6-speed manual or X-Tronic automatic transmission.

This four-cylinder, 16-valve unit is equipped with a variable-geometry turbocharger, a 1,600-bar fuel-injection rail and piezo-electric injectors. Its maximum power stands at 175hp (127kW) at 3,750rpm, with impressive peak torque of 380Nm available from 2,000 to 3,000rpm.

With the six-speed manual transmission, the 2.0-litre returns 50.4mpg and produces 148g/km of CO2 attracting 31 per cent Benefit in Kind. Or with the Auto Xtronic it returns 47.9mpg, and 156g/km, attracting BIK of 33 per cent.

Handling isn't the best in class, particularly on uneven country roads but give the car its head on the motorway and it turns into an impressive traveller with the top-spec Signature Nav DCi 4WD Auto X-Tronic reaching 0-62mph 9.5seconds, a top speed of 125mph

Time will tell what awaits this Koleos but it's certain to do better than the previous incarnation.

I have a feeling Renault will regret choosing only diesel for the UK and the lack of a seven-seat option may also count for sales

Classy place to spend hours on road

By Ian Donaldson

When it comes to clinching the deal Vauxhall customers wants to see something for their money - and right there in the showroom works best.

So you'll quite likely be popped into the driver's seat of a new Insignia Sports Tourer and be asked to look straight ahead where, if the car has been specced right, you'll feel like

For a £290 option brings a head up display that pops speed and sat nav directions directly on to the windscreen, in your sightline and saving a distracting glance downward. Audi charges £900 for the same thing, by the

Wander round the rear of this new load lugger from Luton and you may find a biggish cardboard box in the boot, its 135 litres capacity being the precise increase in cargo capacity over the old Sport Tourer.

It's the sort of obvious, practical demonstration of a car's capabilities that, we're told by the men who know at Vauxhall. that makes people happy to sign on the Very sensible too: you may admire the looks of the new largest estate in the Vauxhall range even spot its modest growth over the one before - but life with a car that will have to earn its living quickly boils down to practicalities.

The outgoing model wasn't quite practical enough, apparently. Too tight for legroom in the back, for starters. The new one stretches the distance between front and rear wheels to the benefit of rear seat passengers.

They now enjoy enough room for two six-footers to sit comfortably in tandem. Not quite the limo-like stretch of a Skoda Superb, though, which is actually shorter than the new Insignia but in a class of its own in space

The Skoda has the Vauxhall licked on boot room too and so does the VW Passat estate but a perhaps more direct competitor. Ford's Mondeo, is smaller in the luggage bay than the Insignia with back seat up or down.

Whatever the figures show you won't declare the new Vauxhall lacking in stowage space, and worth the £1,500 lift over the Grand Sport hatchback sibling.

Swallow

The great majority will be heading for life as a company car and there's surely ample room for all the paraphernalia that goe's with it.

And at weekends when the family piles on board, the Sports Tourer will swallow all the football kit for the Second XI and still have space for pizzas on the way home.

Prices start at £18,685 for a Design version with a new 1.5 litre 140 horsepower petrol

Not many will go for the entry level trim but Vauxhall thinks the current swing against diesel (warranted or not) might make this petrol model surprisingly popular.

For another £795 you move up to a Design Nav spec, perhaps essential for anyone who needs to know precisely how far away the next business meeting is and when they're going to get there.

You can have a car without sat nav in the next grade up – SRi – but you wonder how many will, with prices from £21,580 for a map enabled (petrol) version.

An SRi 1.6 litré 136 horsepower diesel (£23,240) tried over a mixed route on the press launch showed 54mpg at the end in comparison to the 40mpg of the petrol car, which felt less lively too. Both rode well and felt a mostly classy place to while away hours on the road. There are plenty of cubbies and stowage places and a crisp, business-like feel to the way dials are drawn and switches placed.

The new Insignia Tourer stretches the distance between front and rear wheels to the benefit of rear seat passengers

As befits a car that must appeal to a multitude of company pecking orders, there are plenty of engines to choose from, starting with two versions of the new 1.5 petrol (140 and 165PS) and five diesels in either 1.6 or 2.0 litres capacity and power outputs from 110 to

A 2.0 litre petrol with 260 horsepower, automatic gears and all-wheel drive is waiting in the wings but its 199g/km and eye-watering £1,200 first year's road tax are likely to keep it a rare sight. The 112g/km and £160 tax of the cleanest diesel will be a bigger pull in a market where practicalities still count. Standard spec, or the options list, will provide Apple CarPlay and Android Auto phone integration, heated seats for outer rear passengers, powerful LED lights and even the ability to book a hotel by speaking to a real human as you drive along, via Vauxhall's

And your sat nav will take you straight there,

nine-goal thriller

ST MARTINS made it three wins on the bounce in the West Mid-lands League division one with a thrilling 5-4 victory at Telford Juniors.

Buoyed by their 6-1 demolition of Tipton Town in their previous outing, the Saints went into the clash with Telford Juniors full of a confidence as they looked to carry on their viscois them. on their winning streak.

The first 20 minutes was full of chances, with Shawn Melusi going close for the visitors before Jack-son Hassanyeh was narrowly off target from a Callum Graybrook

However, it was Telford who got the first goal of the game with a darting run at the St Martins defence, the striker managing to squeeze in a shot which found its way into the back of the net.

The hosts doubled their lead five minutes before half time with a controversial free kick from the edge of the box.

But the Saints were up for the fight, and moments into the second half, a great strike from outside the box from Hassanyeh found the top corner to bring the visitors back into the game.

Telford, however, restored their two goal cushion when a cross found the net, before Melusi pulled one back when pouncing on a re-bound after Tom Ash's shot had Graybrook reduced the arrears straight from the kick off, then Dave Easthope levelled matters when keeping his cool to find the bottom corner from the rebound after Melusi's shot had been saved.

With the game in the balance at 4-4, Telford were reduced to 10 men, before Hassanyeh settled the issue with a terrific free kick.

A second dismissal followed for the home side as St Martins held firm for a fine win courtesy of a great team effort that lifted the side up to ninth in the table.

Town suffer home defeat to high-fliers

FC OSWESTRY Town's hopes of building on their first win in the Hallmark North West Counties League division one were dashed as they slipped to a 4-1 home loss to promotion chasing Litherland RE-

Despite lying in the basement places, Town had gone into the encounter in good heart after halting a run of eight straight league defeats with a 2-1 success at Cheadle Town the week before.

But, despite some good parfer

the week before.

But, despite some good performances and having their chances, they met their match in Liverpool outfit Litherland who ran out convincing winners to consolidate their position in second place. Luke Holden gave the visitors a flying start with a second minute opener, but Jamie Hands had the Oswestry side on terms six minutes

That was how it stayed until the break, but Town's hopes faded when Holden converted a penalty three minutes into the second period for his second goal of the game before Josh Hamilton (54) and Matty Hamilton's header on the hour sealed their fate.

Victory meant that REMYCA have won all of their games in September, while Town now face a trek to mid-table Carlisle City on Saturday as they chase a second win of the

"Returning to the Sixes tournament after five years, we had no expectations and were delighted to not only win games against some of the biggest sporting schools in the UK, but to return to Oswestry with the Plate Cup."

Llanrhaeadr targeting a Cup upset

ON-SONG Llanrhaeadr are targeting a Welsh Cup upset when they entertain Queens Park in the first round of the JD Welsh Cup on Saturday.

Llan have pulled off some notable results in the competition in recent seasons, and now set their sights on their Wrexham visitors from the Cymru Alliance.

Queens Park have struggled this term since their promotion to the Alli-ance, with last week's 7-0 hammering at Caernarfon Town adding to their problems.

But, despite his side's good form in the Spar Mid Wales League, Llan-rhaeadr chairman Mel Roberts still anticipates a stern test against higher league opposition.

"It will be a tough game regardless of their league form as they are a Cymru Alliance club which we should be aspir-ing to be," he said. "We're looking for-ward to the challenge."

GUILSFIELD also have home advantage when they renew acquaintance with former Cymru Alliance club Mold Alex, who they defeated in extra time last season. Berriew visit local rivals and Spar second division club Abermule as they endeavour to keep their flag flying in the competition.

LLANFAIR UNITED face a tough

LLANFAIR UNITED face a tough task at Flint Town United, a side they famously defeated last season on their way to reaching the quarter-finals.
Chirk AAA, holders of the FAW Trophy, go to Brickfield Rangers, while Carno will look to get back on track when they entertain Gresford Athletic.
Saturday's first round games (selected ties): Buckley Town v Llandioes Town, Carno v Gresford Athletic. Garden Village v Penrhyncoch, Aberaeron v Llanelli, Llarhneadt v FC Queens Park, Flint Town Ud v Llanelli, Llarhus UK v Bow Street, Brickfield Rangers v Chik AAA, Caerswa v Prestatyn Sports, Cwmamman United v Rhayader Town.

Eagles looking for elusive home win

COBRA will look to continue their unbeaten start to the season when they entertain Powys rivals Llanidloes in the second round of the WRU Bowl on Saturday (2.30).

The Meifod men have won all four games this term, three in the Welsh League division two (north), after last weekend's comfortable 32-3 rain soaked success at home to Rhyl.

But they could face a sterner chal-lenge this weekend against a Llanidloes side who, also undefeated this season.

Meanwhile, OSWESTRY look for their first home win in the South Lancs and Cheshire Two - but face a tough task when they welcome unbeaten Liverpool Collegiate on Saturday (3pm).

While they have had little joy at home this term. Oswestry have won all three away outings on the road - the latest being a 12-8 success at Wigan last week-
